

NCNW Partners with One Shared World

Whether we realize it or not, our lives are intertwined with those of women around the globe. Their struggles are our struggles—their problems are our problems—their future is our future.

That is why NCNW is a key partner in One Shared WorldSM—a new national education campaign to encourage American working women to learn more, connect more, and do more to help our sisters in developing countries live better, healthier and more secure lives. This initiative complements the work of our International Development Center and our consultative status with the United Nations.

This exciting campaign will kick off on International Women's Day, March 8, 2006. So, begin to think about what you as an individual and we as an organization can do to generate dialogue in our social and professional circles about this sometimes overwhelming and important issue.

Visit www.onesharedworld.org to learn more about how we can help tackle global poverty. And, invite your colleagues and friends too. Because in this world, we all share. Hope is our common language.

For more specific details about NCNW and our campaign activities, contact Kahlil Kuykendall, IDC Deputy Director, via email at international@ncnw.org, or by phone at (202) 383-9154.
